Built between 1861 and 1963, the Lancaster Gate Hotel was known as the Douglas House from approximately 1938-69. Part of the building was an exclusive members of the US Military which hosted legendary performers like Ben E King, Jim Reeves and Tina Turner. The property has been mentioned in many publications throughout the years including Larry Jordans His Untold Story, the Douglas House by Gerald A Collins and Home Bases by Sean C Kelly, as well as being listed as one of London's five leading residential hotels in the Times Newspaper in April 1933. The décor of the bar pays homage to the legacy of the building.
